The GOVERNOR'S LADY

A Novelization of Alice Bradley's Play
By GERTRUDE STEVENSON
ILLUSTRATIONS FROM PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE STAGE PRODUCTION
COPYRIGHT, 1913, (PUBLICATION RIGHTS RESERVED) BY DAVID BELASCO

The story is a direct narrative of a fancied incompatibility between a self-made, iron-willed man and the humble, home-loving wife of his early struggles.

CHAPTER I.

Daniel Slade sat reading the evening newspaper in the handsomely appointed library of his spacious home. To all intents he was a man at peace with the world. He had money and power. He had advanced from a penniless miner to a millionaire figure in the business world. At fifty his were the fruits of a well-spent, energetic life. Handsome and immaculate in his perfectly tailored evening clothes, he fitted into the beautiful room with its rich tapestries and oriental rugs with all the ease and naturalness of a man born to culture and wealth.

Every now and then his eyes wandered from his newspaper to the figure of his wife sitting at the other side of the richly carved table. The tiny, unimposing little woman in her badly cut, dun-colored gown was the one incongruous detail in the room. She was like a shabby little prairie flower suddenly transplanted to a conservatory where brilliant orchids and lovely roses bloomed all about her, her faint little fragrance overpowered by their heavy sweetness—her delicate loveliness completely submerged by very contrast with the radiant beauty of her surroundings.

To Slade's critical eyes, the dowdy little figure, with the work basket in her lap and her head bent over the stocking she was contentedly darning, was an actual eyesore. He had fitted up a magnificent home that would have made a perfect setting for a princess, and his wife's appearance had not changed a particle from the days when they lived in a tumble-down cottage and he worked in the mines in his shirt-sleeves. With the getting of vast amounts of money he had acquired a veneer of manners and tastes that at times failed to conceal the rough and brutal instincts of the real man. His social horizon was enlarging, but within it his wife seemed to find no place. He wanted, beyond this and everything, to climb the political tree and pick the fruits thereof. His wife seemed not to know that there was such a thing as a political tree to climb. With herself, her husband and her work she was contented and happy.

The wives of other men of his position were social queens noted for their beautiful gowns, their entertaining and their clever wit. He alone was shackled to a woman he would have been ashamed to introduce to his friends. Only he was tied to a wife he could not force either by pleading or argument to enter into the life which meant so much to him.

Tonight as he rehearsed in his mind his many unsuccessful efforts to make Mary advance and take an interest in his life as it was now, rebellion surged in his heart. He had struggled year after year to attain his present standing, his present position in the world, and Mary, the one loved thing of his life, insisted on hanging like a millstone around his neck.

Why, oh, why, couldn't the woman progress? Why hadn't she developed as he had done? Why was she contentedly sitting there satisfied to remain just as she had been twenty years ago, hopelessly behind the times? And if she wouldn't advance—why should he consent to be held back by her? If she wouldn't go on with him—he would leave her behind. The thought and the resultant decision had their birth suddenly but positively in the man's mind. He would make one more argument, one last appeal. If Mary wouldn't meet him half way, Mary could stay behind with her everlasting darning and her eternal knitting. She could wash and cook and stew and sew, if she liked, but she couldn't do it in his mansion.

But Daniel Slade was no more uncomfortable at having her there than Mary Slade was at being obliged to live in this great, elegant house, with its crowds of servants and its routine, absolutely foreign and well-nigh hateful to her. She knew she didn't fit into her surroundings. She realized her own inharmoniousness. Her attempts to look natural and feel comfortable were pathetic. She felt lost without the task of overseeing the Monday's washing. She was heart-broken because she couldn't personally superintend the making of Dan's coffee. Her life was incomplete because a hired cook made the bread that was served on the table and because Dan never seemed to miss the evenly brown loaves that had been her especial pride in the old days.

Mary Slade was as commonplace as a cup of boiled tea. She was a plain, ordinary, everyday woman, who loved a simple, unpretentious life, with the neighbors dropping in for a word or two, exchanging recipes for muffins and debating the proper way to season a stew.

There was neither charm nor comfort for her in the vista of rooms opening out from the spacious library. The brocade chairs were straight and didn't rock. They were high-posted and stilted compared to her own low-seated little rocker in the cottage. When she sat back in them, stiffly and awkwardly, her feet didn't even reach the floor, but dangled restlessly above the priceless rug that was one of her husband's newest purchases.

All big crises in life are the results of trifles. It took the merest incident to crystallize Slade's thought into action. Mary had picked up a portion of the paper after it had dropped from her husband's hands. She started to read the printed page with all the serious importance of a little child trying to do something very big and grown-up.

Suddenly her eyes lighted with pleasure and a tender smile of pride and delight illuminated her features. In turning the pages she had suddenly discovered a picture of her husband, under which she read a simple but significant line:

"Daniel S. Slade, a Possible Governor."

"Oh, Dan," she cried, happily. "Isn't this a fine picture of you. I could almost imagine it was going to speak to me."

Then she paused a little wistfully and doubtfully before she asked:

"But do you really want to be governor?"

"Want to be?" Slade caught his breath as he repeated her question. Want to be—when every aim and ambition the last few years had been made in the one direction, toward the one longed-for goal—political power! Want to be—when years before he had turned his eyes on the governor's chair and had been battling grimly, silently, persistently toward that end ever since! Want to be—when that was his one ambition, the one thing he had yet to achieve!

He sighed wearily to himself. That Mary could ask that question was the best proof of how irrevocably they had drifted apart. Living in the same house with him, eating at the same table, day after day at his side, the little woman knew no more of his real self or his ambitions than the merest stranger.

"It's a nice story about yer, Dan," Mary went on, all unconscious of the struggle going on just a few feet away from her—the struggle between the heart of a man that calls out to the companion of his youth, the sharer of his joys and struggles and the brain of a man that demands the glory of power and the fulfillment of ambition. "But, Dan," questioned Mary's gentle little voice, "who's The Governor's Lady?" "His wife, of course," snapped Slade. "What does it say about you?" He reached over and took the paper from her hands, leaned forward eagerly toward the light and frowned as he read:

"Should Daniel S. Slade, the ex-miner, ex-town marshal, ex-sheriff, ex-United States marshal, ex-land boomer and multimillionaire, arrive, it will be (Continued on Page 2)"

NOW THAT EASTER IS.... PAST

cold, disagreeable weather has caused a great many people to "hold off" buying their Spring wearing apparel, we have decided to make deep cuts in several departments in our Big Store.

ALTHOUGH our Spring business so far has been above the average, we still find that we have a much larger stock on hand than is justifiable at this time of the year. Having bought very largely in many of the biggest departments, and to move the stock quick and fast we have decided to reduce prices and clean up :

IN OUR Clothing Department you will find everything up-to-date--Men's Boys', Youths' and Children's Clothing--all brand new stuff, bought for this Spring's business, and to move them quick and fast, we have made big reductions in price. See them before buying your Spring Suit.

OUR entire stock of Shoes are up-to-date. Men's, Women's, Youths' and Children's will be sold at a cut price to reduce stock. We carry the Queen Quality fine shoes for ladies, and William Kneeland's fine shoes for men, and many of the very best brands of Boys' and Children's Shoes. They will all be sold at a reduction. Get our prices and save money.

WHY PAY MORE

when you can buy the most up-to-date and genuine Hand-Tailored Suits, Coats, Skirts and Dresses for Ladies' and Misses' from us at a reduction of 1-4 to 1-3 off. You know we show the largest and best line of Ladies' Ready-to-wear Apparel in Richmond; and now when we are slaughtering prices in this department, don't fail to take advantage of it. Buy your Spring Suit, Coat or Dress now and save money. :

WE HAVE the prettiest line of Wash Goods, Laces and Embroideries ever shown in Richmond. All are fresh and new. Come and see them. It is worth a trip to our Store even if you want to get posted about new styles. You are always welcome. :

GET OUR low prices on Domestics, Bleached and Brown Cottons, Bed Ticking, Gingham, Percales, etc. We will save you money :

HAVE YOU seen our New Carpets, Rugs, Lace Curtains, Linoleums, Oil Cloths, etc. We are showing some exclusive patterns for Spring, and since we are making low prices in this department, you can't afford not to give us a look. See them and save money. :

WE ARE making special prices on Home Dresses for ladies. We are showing a big line of them. Children's Wash Dresses in Gingham, Percales, White Goods, etc. All sizes and pretty styles. You can't afford to make them at the prices we are naming. :

Interesting to Fox Hunters.

We have received from our old friend and former Madisonian, J. H. Boggs, of Logan, Ky., the following letter, which we publish with pleasure, and which will be of interest to Mr. Boggs' many friends in this and adjoining counties:

LOGAN, KY., 5-2-14.

Editor Climax and All Old Friends: The enclosed article is to let the sportsmen of Madison county know that I am still in the chase--not for the purpose of standing the dog or to sell a dog, for I never do either. I have simply bought the dog (Goodman) for an out-cross on my own pack. Mr. Goodman, of Paris, and myself have been breeders of the Kentucky fox hound for over 60 years and this cross should make the grandest combination ever produced in this State. If it is not asking too much of you, I would like for you to let the fox hunters of old Madison know it through the columns of the Climax. I will be over soon, as spring is about here.

NOTICE TO SPORTSMEN.

J. H. Boggs, of Logan, Ky., took the train recently and went to Paris for the purpose of purchasing a pure-bred Goodman fox hound for an out-cross on his strain. He was successful in getting Goodman, a noted dog, from Clay Gate-skill's kennel and bred by him. This dog is white, black and tan, white predominating; seven years old and true to type. This combination makes a straight cross of the two oldest and best breeds in Kentucky. Messrs. Boggs and Goodman have been breeders of this State's most noted fox hounds for over sixty years, breeding to the best and for the best hunters, trailers and for great speed. They have accomplished their desire, and the two great strains combined should prove to be winners in the field and on the bench. Never before has such a combination been made and this one will "deliver the goods." This is the cream of Kentucky's breeding in a nut-shell.

Call on Lackey & Todd for garden seed and seed potatoes. Phone 62. 32-1f.

K. of P. Fair.

The Knights of Pythias of Lincoln county will hold their third annual fair at Stanford August 19, 20 and 21. It is needless to say that it will be a good one, their former successful exhibitions having established that fact. The fairs are most enjoyable to all who attend them, as well as financially successful. When the K. P.'s get behind a proposition it is put through with a rush, and especially is this true of the Stanford contingent, where they have one of the most flourishing lodges in the State. Success to you, boys! We'll help you all we can.

Check Your April Cough.

Thawing frost and April rains chill you to the very marrow, you catch cold--Head and lungs stuffed--You are feverish--Cough continually and feel miserable--You need Dr. King's New Discovery. It soothes inflamed and irritated throat and lungs, stops cough, your head clears up, fever leaves, and you feel fine. Mr. J. T. Davis, Stickney Corner, Me., "Was cured of a dreadful cough after doctor's treatment and all other remedies failed." Relief or money back. Pleasant--Children like it. Get a bottle to-day. 50c and $1.00, at your Druggist.

Woman's Kingdom.

The following article on woman suffrage is from the pen of Senator George G. Vest, written some thirty years ago or more:

What man can without aversion turn from the blessed memory of that dear old grandmother, or the gentle words and caressing hand of that blessed mother gone to the unknown world, to face in its stead the idea of a female justice of the peace or town constable? For my part, I want when I go to my home--when I turn from the arena where man contends with man for what we call the prizes of this paltry world--I want to go back, not to be received in the masculine embrace of some female ward politician, but to the earnest, loving look and touch of a true woman. I want to go back to the jurisdiction of the wife, the mother, and instead of a lecture upon finance or the construction of the constitution, I want those blessed, loving details of domestic life and of domestic love. What we want in this country is to avoid emotional suffrage, and what we need is to put more logic into public affairs and less feeling.

There are spheres in which feeling should be paramount. There are kingdoms in which the heart should reign supreme. That kingdom belongs to woman--the real sentiment, the realm of love, the realm of the gentler, the holier and the kindlier attributes that make the name of wife, mother and sister next to that of God Himself. I would not, and I say it deliberately, degrade woman by giving her the right of suffrage. I mean the word in its full significance, because I believe that woman, as she is today, the queen of home and hearts, is above the political collisions of this world and should always be kept above them.

A Hoosier Cabinet makes a Model Kitchen

Why Do 700,000 Women Own Hoosier Cabinets?

When you know that 700,000 women use Hoosier Kitchen Cabinets three times every day, doesn't it suggest to you that you need this dudgey-saver in YOUR kitchen?

Figure it out to yourself this way: Would they have bought these cabinets without convincing themselves that they SAVE MILES OF STEPS and hours of time? Would so many have bought them at all if users hadn't told others and thus influenced their friends to buy them.

Since this means that more Hoosier Cabinets have been sold than all other 128 makes of cabinets combined, isn't it proof enough that the Hoosier is the best cabinet on the market?

When you see how the Hoosier groups four cupboards around a large metal table and places 400 articles at your fingers' ends so you can sit down and work--AND REST while working--you'll want one of these "White Beauties."

Come pick one out today.

ney Stacy, Virgil Gaines, Wm. Walker,

M. F. Harris, Miss Judith Tudor and

Rev. Fryman, of Irvine, accompanied the body of the infant daughter of Mr.

and Mrs. James Ashcraft to Richmond for burial Monday.

It will be gratifying to the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Wagers, of Waco, to learn of their improvement.

They were both afflicted with pneumonia, but are now recovering. At the same time of their sickness, their infant son was quite ill with laryngitis.

Mrs. W. W. Watts and daughter, Miss

Emma Watts, of Richmond, and Miss

Mary Watts Knight, of Dallas, Texas, are guests at The Seelbach for several days. They are making a trip in Mrs.

Watts' automobile. Miss Knight will visit

Miss Maurice Bridges before returning to Texas.—Louisville Times.

Miss Bettie French was hostess of the

Mary Pattie Music Club on Wednesday afternoon. Verdi's "La Traviata" was the subject of a delightful program after which the following officers were elected for the year 1914-15: President, Miss

Tommie Cole Covington; Vice president,

Miss Rey Millon; Secretary and Treasurer, Miss Elizabeth Wagers.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. M.

Wells, who have rooms at the Governor's old mansion, Frankfort, quite a crowd of little folks enjoyed the hospitality of Lou Jane Ella Wells who gave them a surprise in the form of an Easter egg hunt. The table was beautifully decorated in pink and white, the favors being tiny Easter chickens attached to the place cards. Mrs. Wells was assisted in the entertaining by Mrs. W. B. Hoop and Mrs. J. S. Shearer. Lou Jane Ella

is a niece of Mrs. C. H. Park and P. B.

Broadbush, of this city.

SAULEY FOR CONGRESS.

District Politicians Interviewed

At Frankfort Say He Is

The Man to Beat Mr.

Helm on Canal

Issue.

A dispatch from Frankfort published in the Louisville Herald Friday was as follows:

Frankfort, Ky., April 16.—Interesting gossip of Congressional politics in the Eighth District was brought to the Capital today by several prominent politicians of that district, who came to the State House on department business.

According to the report they brought the opposition to the re-election of Congressman Harvey Helm is about to center on Shelton M. Sauley, editor of the Stanford Interior Journal, and formerly a newspaper man of Frankfort, as the proper man with whom to defeat Helm.

Stanford is in Lincoln, Helm's home county, and according to the prediction

the Democrats made here today, Sauley is the only man in the district who can beat Helm in his home county and carry the lower tier of counties in the Eighth, composed of Adair, Baser, Gar-rad, Boyle, Lincoln, Mercer and Madison.

Sauley's popularity in his home county is said by the men here today to be due to the record he made at the recent session of the General Assembly, when he fathered and led the successful fight for a change in the road engineers' law.

His efforts and vote against the Glenn insurance bill also made him many friends at home and in other counties of the district, according to the Democrats,

as well as his great work as chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations, in giving the recent Legislature the record of having been the most economical that has met in Kentucky in the past score of years.

According to the Eighth District men here, opposition to the re-election of Helm has developed all over the Eighth

District since he chose to align himself with Caleb Powers and John Langley, gram. They said that a candidate who would make a fight for the nomination on such grounds would defeat Helm overwhelmingly.

Sauley's paper, the Interior Journal, was the first county paper in Kentucky to espouse the cause for the nomination of Wilson at Baltimore, and opponents of Helm say that on a platform of endorsement or non-endorsement of the President, the present Congressman will find the Democrats of his district overwhelmingly against him and in favor of the President.—Adv.

Funeral of Wm. T. Jones.

The funeral of Wm. T. Jones will take place this afternoon at the First Baptist church at 3 o'clock P. M. Notices were distributed saying at the home of his father on Moberly Ave. but a change was decided upon and other notices sent out later.

Come in and see our prices on furniture.

Dear Amy:-
I called yesterday on Mrs. Newcomer, who has just moved here. She told me that lots of her things were broken and scared in moving and asked me, since she was a stranger in town, to tell her where to buy new furniture. I told her to go to no one but where we always traded because she would be sure to find what she wanted at reasonable prices. Come soon.
Bye, Bye, Lou.
P.S.—Mrs. Newcomer has just dropped in. She was so pleased with the new furniture she bought from

Mr. Trim Deatherage Friday left at this office part of a stone of very heavy weight which was picked up on the Lexington pike, evidently of meteoric origin, as it was still warm when found. At the time the stone fell there was not a cloud in the sky. We are not expert mineralogists, but the stone is impregnated with a mineral of some character and its weight is greatly out of proportion to its size.

Keep Your Eye on Him.
We mean on M. M. Hamilton, the E. Main street progressive, live wire, accommodating meat market man. He keeps ahead of them all. He has lately installed in his place of business a counter refrigerator. It is the only one in this city, the kind used by large meat markets in large cities, but not often seen in country towns. It keeps meats and vegetables cold and preserves them from insects, dust, dirt and other contaminating substances. Call and ask him to show you how it works.

Death of Sumner Park.
Last issue we had a brief notice of the death of Mr. Park. Later we received a letter from his brother, Mr. Cyrus Park, of Excelsior Springs, giving more complete information, which we are glad to publish for the benefit of friends and relatives among our readers:
Mr. Sumner Park died at his home, 2604 Montague Avenue, Saturday, April 11th. He had lived in Kansas City for about 35 years and is survived by his wife and two children, Mary Louise and Sumner L.
The following is copied from the Kansas City Star of April 12 and will be read with regret by his friends and relatives:
"Mr. Park was born in Madison county, Ky., August 20, 1832. He was the fourth son of Joshua Dillingham Park and Mary Ann Taylor Park, whose hospitable home was in the Speedwell section of Madison, until 1870, when the family moved to Clay county, Missouri. Here and in Kansas City the surviving members yet reside. They are Cyrus, Walter, William and Charles; Mrs. A. L. Norfleet and Miss Lucie Park."
The venerable Mrs. Jesse Cobb, Sr., of this city, and the aged Mr. George W. Park, of Speedwell, are respectively aunt and uncle of the deceased.

Re-Organized.
The Normal City Laundry has received its papers of incorporation under its new management and last Monday held a meeting of the directors. Officers elected were Eugene Miller, president, and George W. Goodloe, secretary and treasurer. J. J. Greenleaf was the third incorporator and will be a director in the company. Stock will be sold to the amount of $25,000. The Normal Laundry is a home enterprise that should be supported by home patronage, as should all local institutions. A "pull together" is what our city needs.

"California or Bust."
Last Friday morning a crowd gathered upon Main street, attracted by the "ocean to ocean tourist, the Hays brothers, en route to California. They told the Climax reporter, who interviewed them, they were from Charleston, S. C., and having saved enough money to purchase a horse and wagon, determined to attend the world's big show, the Panama Exposition, and had gotten this far on their journey. They pay the expenses of the trip by doing fence signs and other kinds of advertising for enterprising merchants along their route.

WAR WITH MEXICO?
Situation Briefly Stated.
On the 9th inst. a boat without an American flag and with nine marines and one officer landed in Tampico, Mex. Col. Hinojosa, who has charge of defending that point, detained the marines and officer and conducted them to the presence of the General in command of the forts.
It should be remembered that at this time the port not only was under military control, but was withstanding an attack by the rebels.
Gen. Zaragoza immediately and without even investigating the case, put the marines and officer at liberty, placed Hinojosa in prison and sent an apology to Rear Admiral Mayo, the commander of the American fleet.
To all appearances Admiral Mayo approved and was satisfied to accept on behalf of the U. S. government the apology. Some time later, however, he demanded another and a different apology. The matter was taken up by the Washington authorities, who endorsed Admiral Mayo's views and demanded the second apology, and after several communications had passed between the U. S. officials and those of Mexico, President Wilson on Saturday the 18th, at 2 p. m., issued the following ultimatum:
"Gen. Huerta is still insisting upon doing something less than has been demanded and something less than would constitute an acknowledgment that his representatives were entirely in the wrong in the indignities they have put upon the government of the United States."
"The President has determined that if Gen. Huerta has not yielded by 6 p. m. Sunday afternoon he will take the matter to Congress Monday."
Gen. Huerta has refused to accede to the President's demand. Mr. Wilson called a Cabinet meeting at 10:30 Monday morning. The result of this was that the Cabinet stands by the President. A joint meeting of both branches of Congress was called for Monday at 3 p. m., at which time the President laid the whole matter before that body. What the outcome will be no one can predict. The U. S. government has never officially recognized the Huerta government and therefore cannot officially declare war against it.
Besides this, President Wilson says emphatically that under no circumstances will the U. S. fight Mexico. This statement means in the light of events that are taking place, we cannot even hazard a guess. Meanwhile U. S. ships of war are on their way to Mexican waters, due to arrive there this afternoon at 4 o'clock.
LATER—Congress by an almost unanimous vote has authorized the President to declare war against Huerta's de facto government. The resolution expressly states that the U. S. disclaims any hostility toward the Mexican people, or any purpose to make war on them.
More than likely before this paper reaches your home the U. S. government will have taken possession of the Mexican custom houses at Tampico and Vera Cruz.

DEATHS
Mrs. Enoch Grey died at her home on East Walnut street at 2:30 p. m., Tuesday, 14th inst., after two weeks' illness of uremic poisoning. Mrs. Grey was before her marriage Miss Kate O'Connor. She was left an orphan when quite young and was adopted in the home of the late Judge William C. Miller. She is survived by a devoted husband and a brother, Thos. O'Connor, and two children, Ben C., aged 16 years, and Susie Miller, aged 14. Mrs. Grey had been for many years a member of the Presbyterian church and was a kind and gentle woman, who will be greatly missed by her husband, brother, neighbors and friends. She was about 46 years of age. The devotion of herself and husband to each other was a beautiful feature of her whole married life.
Her husband and brother are machinists at the car shops. The burial took place Thursday afternoon in Richmond Cemetery, after services at her late home by Rev. B. C. Horton, of the Methodist church.

The two-year old child of J. B. Ashcraft died at Irvine Sunday, after a short illness. The remains were interred in Richmond Cemetery.

David Anthony O'Neil, eldest son of City Collector, T. C. O'Neil and wife, died at Seton Hospital, Cincinnati, Saturday, April 18, at 3 p. m., aged just 21 years. His remains were brought home on the midnight train that night. The funeral services were held on Tuesday morning in St. Mark's Catholic church, after which the body was laid away in its last resting place in Richmond Cemetery. The long-continued illness of this popular young man is more or less familiar to our readers. In the fall of 1912, while in the employ of Kellogg & Co., his eyes became affected, necessitating his retirement from business. It soon became apparent that the trouble was a tumor on the brain. At intervals within the past 18 months he had undergone three operations, improving temporarily after each, until the last one. On Thursday, the 16th inst., he went for the third time to Seton Hospital and was operated on Saturday, the 18th, from which he never recovered. His father and mother, brothers, sisters and relatives in this community have many friends who mourn with them the son, brother and friend.

At P. A. C. Infirmary, Thursday, the 15th, Miss Nannie T. Harris died, in her 63d year, of cancer of the stomach. She had been in ill health for several months. Born and reared in this county, where she spent her entire life, she had many friends, though but few surviving relatives. After funeral services at the home of her brother-in-law, Mr. H. Clay Jones, on Big Hill Avenue, Friday afternoon by Rev. B. C. Horton, of the Methodist church. Her remains were laid to rest in Richmond Cemetery.

At Rice Station, Estill county, Mrs. Thomas Kirby, aged 41 years, died last Friday and was buried Saturday.

Mrs. Wm. E. Myers died at her home on East Main street, Friday night, April 17. She was in her sixty-seventh year. For 39 years she has made Richmond her home and few women were better known. She was a kind hearted, lovable woman, a consistent member of the Methodist church, a good neighbor, a faithful friend and devoted to her home husband and children. It was an unusual coincidence that on the day of her death her husband observed his 74th birthday. Her faithful and devoted daughter, Mrs. A. H. Nance, of Ludlow, who had been at her bedside for some weeks with her when the end came. One son, W. B. Smith Myers, of St. Louis, had been with her but had left for home only a few hours before her death. Another son, Joe Myers, of Louisville, came as soon as news of her death reached him. Besides her husband and three children above mentioned she leaves two sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Ferrill and Mrs. Pattie Chenault, both

HEALTHY HAIR==NO MORE DANDRUFF USE PARISIAN SAGE

It's entirely needless to have unsightly, matted, thin or faded hair. A little care is all that is needed to make it thick, soft, pretty, perfectly healthy and free from dandruff.

Use Parisian Sage—it supplies hair needs and is absolutely harmless. It quickly stops itching head and falling hair, and is one of the best tonics to invigorate the scalp and make the hair grow long and beautiful.

Get a bottle of Parisian Sage to-day from H. L. Perry's Drug Store or any drug counter. It costs but 50 cents. Rub it into the scalp—all dandruff disappears—your head feels fine—the hair pretty and perfectly healthy. 35-2t.

A Kentucky Mother.

The descendants of a single Kentucky mother, Mrs. Sallie Marcum, a resident of Red Bird, Clay county, are said to be the greatest of any woman in Kentucky. She is 87 years old. She has ten living children and four dead; ninety-three grand-children living and nineteen dead.

Trees Have Human Traits.

That trees possess some of the same characteristics that belong to people seems almost incredible, yet nevertheless, it is true. Nature is pretty closely allied. Trees have the power of suggesting thoughts and feelings. And these thoughts and feelings are attributes of people. In other words, trees are sometimes thought of as being possessed of some characteristics that belong to people. The oak tree, because of its size and shape of limbs, suggests strength. The elm tree symbolizes grace and beauty. The birch is sometimes called the "Lady of the Forest." Some trees are weeping, some gay, some quiet and retiring. Some, such as the sycamore, are ghostlike. Others, like the honey locust, because of the great array of thorns, appear warlike. The Lombardy poplar, which grows so tall, suggests precision. One of these standing by itself like a lone sentinel is one of Nature's most impressive sights.

Thursday, April 30, 1914, at 10 A. M.

The undersigned, as agent for Ella G. and Wm. R. Frazier, will offer at public sale at their farm on the Briar Hill Pike about six miles from Lexington, Ky., the following property:

1st—Farm containing 166 2-3 acres of land, 40 acres in bluegrass, 20 acres in clover, 25 acres in wheat and timothy, 14 acres in rye, 26 acres of woodland and the remainder under cultivation. This farm is well improved and lies directly opposite the farm upon which was grown the prize tobacco which brought the highest price at the Loose Leaf Tobacco market for the last two years, is well watered by springs, besides having three good ponds, has good orchard with plenty of fruit and is now under good fence.

Upon this farm is a good residence of 10 rooms, also one 4-room tenant house also necessary outbuildings, three comparatively new barns as follows: one tobacco barn 142x52, one tobacco barn 60x36, one stock barn 40x36 with 8 box stalls.

Terms will be reasonable and made known on day of sale.

Will also offer at same time and place, immediately following the sale of the farm, the following described personal property: One mare mule 9 years old; 1 mare mule 3 years old; 1 bay horse colt 3 years old; 1 ten year old bay mare; 1 Jersey cow 9 years old; 2 Jersey cows each 2 years old; 1 Jersey heifer 1 year old; 75 ewes and 60 lambs; 2 Rhode Island Red chickens; one lot of turkeys; 1 corn planter (J. I. Case); 1 tobacco setter (Bemis); 1 riding cultivator (J. I. Case); 1 Baker wagon, tobacco sticks and other things too numerous to mention.

TERMS—Upon personal property will be all amounts under $10.00 cash in hand, over that amount six months without interest, the purchaser to execute a note with approved security, before the property is removed from the premises.

"FAGGED-OUT" WOMEN

Will Find Help in This Letter.

Overworked, run down, "fagged out" women who feel as though they could hardly drag about, should profit by Mrs. Brill's experience.

She says: "I was in a very weak, run-down condition. Life was not worth living. I could not sleep, was very nervous, stomach bad, and was not able to work."

"I consulted with one or two physicians, without benefit. I read of Vinol helping some one in a similar condition so I began to take it, and it simply did wonders for me. I gained in weight and I am now in better health and stronger than ever. I can not find words enough to praise Vinol."—Mrs. W. H. Brill, Racine, Wis. Thousands of women and men who were formerly weak and sickly owe their present rugged health to the wonderful strength-creating effects of Vinol. We guarantee Vinol to build you up and make you strong. If it does not we give back your money.

P. S.—For rough, scaly skin, try our Sazo Salve. We guarantee it.

B. L. Middleton, Richmond, Ky.

Big Estate.

Adolphus Busch, the St. Louis brewer, who recently died in that city, left an estate of approximately $35,000,000. He made it in the manufacture and sale of beer.

Banks in Kentucky.

Kentucky with a population of two and one-half millions of people has 644 banking institutions. Of that number there are 11 private banks, 17 savings banks, 473 State banks, and 143 National banks.

Lexington To Have Another Paper.

Mr. J. L. Sowers, formerly of this city, but more recently publisher of a paper at Wilmore, was in this city last Wednesday. He expects at a very early date to start the publication of a weekly paper at Lexington.

Rheumatic Pains Relieved.

Why suffer from rheumatism when relief may be had at so small a cost? Mrs. Elmer Hatch, Peru, Ind., writes: "I have been subject to attacks of rheumatism for years. Chamberlain's Liniment always relieves me immediately, and I take pleasure in recommending it to others." 25 and 50 cent bottles. For sale by all dealers.

Queen Eleanor Is Coming.

Queen Eleanor, of Bulgaria, will visit the United States in May. This will be the first visit of a reigning sovereign to visit the United States in the history of the nation. The Queen expresses great admiration at our proficiency in managing the affairs of nations, and is coming to investigate more thoroughly the work.

A Woman Who Has Become Great Farmer.

The husband of Mrs. Lucile Lewis Perlet, of Texas, was a printer and publisher in San Antonio, Texas. He prospered and with prosperity came a natural determination to remain in that business. Mrs. Perlet, however, always had an intense desire to farm. After a time she decided to take it up independent of her husband. She took possession of her ranch in 1900, at which time her entire domain consisted of sixty-two and one-half acres. She has succeeded beyond expectations, and as for her husband he is quite dumbfounded. Of him she says: "I have elevated him to the proud position of my shipper. We are one in our endeavors, but I am manager of this concern—don't forget that for an instant!"—Farm and Fireside.

Dr. Frederick L. Hoffman, a statistician, said that 75,000 persons die of cancer in the United States each year. The mortality rate for cancer was increasing in this country, he said, at the rate of 25 per cent a year. He declares that half of those who will die this year of the disease could be saved by an early operation.

Extension of Telephone Lines.

A new farmers telephone line having five subscribers has just been completed and connected with the Richmond (Ky.) Exchange of the Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Companies. The new line connects with the telephone companies at Union City (Ky.) and runs five miles to serve subscribers in the neighborhood of Doyleville. The following families will enjoy the service: W. C. Griggs, J. H. Berry, Nathan Noland, Samuel Griggs and Archie Dunn. The subscribers are now in communication with the Richmond Exchange, and all subscribers enjoying county service of the Richmond Exchange. The construction of this line and its connection with the Richmond Exchange, is another step in the progress of telephone development that is being made in this section of Madison county under this new plan of the Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Company. Farmers and others in the rural district are enabled to get service at a very reasonable cost, and a great many are taking advantage of the plan.

KILL THE CATARRH GERM—USE HYOMEI.

It's the direct-to-the-spot method—you breathe it. Do not delay and continue to suffer from catarrh, head colds, bronchitis or sniffles. It is not only needless and annoys your friends, but dangerous to your general health.

Begin the Hyomei treatment at once. It is one of the easiest, quickest and surest ways to clear the head and quickly and permanently banish catarrh.

Hyomei being medicated air immediately reaches the sore and irritated membrane and tissues—its antiseptic and germicidal healing begins at once.

You will surely like Hyomei—its relief is not only immediate but lasting. Money refunded by B. L. Middleton if you are not satisfied.

Get the complete outfit—$1.00 size. Druggists everywhere sell Hyomei.

Hon. Harvey Helm's Work.

On recommendation of Representative Harvey Helm, the Postmaster General has ordered the appointment of over twenty Democratic postmasters in the Eighth Congressional district.

A healthy man is a king in his own right; an unhealthy man an unhappy slave. For impure blood and sluggish liver, use Burdock Blood Bitters. On the market 35 years. $1.00 a bottle. Sold by all dealers.

Saloons Knocked Out.

The women voting for the first time in the Illinois township elections, closed more than a thousand saloons, and added sixteen counties to thirty already dry. The dry territory now includes eleven larger cities of the State. Springfield, the capital, remained wet, the women voting for saloons. No territory previously dry was lost by the anti-saloon forces.

Quite Evident.

The Sunday school lesson was concerning the afflictions of Job and his wonderful patience during all his trials. "And now," said the superintendent at the close of the lesson, "Who can tell what condition Job was in at the end of his life?"

"Dead!" answered the sad-looking boy in the back seat.—National Monthly.

Imaginary Heart Trouble.

Do you have pains in the region of the heart? Does your heart thump? Its terrible pounding alarms you? What is wrong? Do you believe these symptoms mean heart trouble? Organic diseases of the heart very seldom occasion much pain. Nearly all of these pains are occasioned by some derangement of the stomach. Meriol Tonic Digestive is especially recommended for indigestion and dyspepsia, and for restoring the stomach to its normal functions and—no more "heart disease." Price $1.00 Wines' Drug Store, exclusive agents.

Counties Without Railroads.

There is much railroad building to be done in Kentucky before the State gets all it needs in transportation facilities. A map lately issued by the State Railroad Commission shows that there are eighteen counties in which there is not a mile of railroad, while there are twenty-nine others that barely escaped being in the no-railroad class by reason of being crossed at some remote corner or having only a few miles. The counties which have no railroads at all are: Monroe, Cumberland, Clinton, Wayne, Russell, Adair, Jackson, Clay, Metcalfe, Knot, Owsley, Casey, Leslie, Martin, Robertson, Trimble and Butler. Of these the first eight counties named are in the south central part of the State and constitute the largest section of Kentucky that is without a railroad. The next seven are Eastern Kentucky counties. Robertson and Trimble are in northern part of the State, and Butler is the only Western Kentucky county that is absolutely without a railroad.

RHEUMA WILL STOP URIC ACID DEPOSIT

Rheumatic Complications Stopped And The "Human Sewers" Restored.

The Kidneys, Bowels and Skin are the "human sewers" which carry off the impurities in the blood. When these are clogged Uric Acid sediment lodges in the muscles and joints and Rheumatism follows. RHEUMA, the great remedy for all forms of the terrible disease, checks the deposit of Uric Acid.

"I suffered from Rheumatism for six years. Tried different doctors, with no relief. I have taken three bottles of RHEUMA and am entirely free from the disease."—P. W. Miller, Catawissa, Penn.

B. L. Middleton will return your money if it fails; 50 cents a bottle.

"Hello."

"I do have the worst trouble with the phone!"

"What's the cause?"

"The service, of course. Let me show you. 'Hello, exchange, hello. Why don't you answer? I want Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Julia Brown. What number? Sixty-two Tanglefoot street. Number? I just told you. Oh, that! You mean her telephone number? Why—it's—there, you've gone and put it all out of my head. I'll have to look in the book. O, dear, dear, the book is up stairs. Well, I never in all my life saw such service!"

HUSBAND RESCUED DESPAIRING WIFE

After Four Years of Discouraging Conditions, Mrs. Bullock Gave Up in Despair. Husband Came to Rescue.

Catron, Ky.—In an interesting letter from this place, Mrs. Bettie Bullock writes as follows: "I suffered for four years, with womanly troubles, and during this time, I could only sit up for a little while, and could not walk anywhere at all. At times, I would have severe pains in my left side.

The doctor was called in, and his treatment relieved me for a while, but I was soon confined to my bed again. After that, nothing seemed to do me any good.

I had gotten so weak I could not stand, and I gave up in despair.

At last, my husband got me a bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I commenced taking it. From the very first dose, I could tell it was helping me. I can now walk two miles without tiring me, and am doing all my work."

If you are all run down from womanly troubles, don't give up in despair. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic. It has helped more than a million women, in its 30 years of continuous success, and should surely help you, too. Your druggist has sold Cardui for years. He knows what it will do. Ask him. He will recommend it. Begin taking Cardui today.

President Marshall is a man of superstitions. One of them is that he had luck to enter or leave a building except through the door by which he first entered it.

Believing as he does in this theory, Marshall never leaves the Capitol except the door at the carriage entrance in the Senate wing.

William C. Redfield, Secretary of Commerce, was stripped of all serious and just allowed to take his own ease, he would run a motor boat by night and a piano by night—and sing. He has also given a good deal of attention in his hours of recreation to the raising of roses, whiskers and collie dogs.

Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman, of Illinois, wears his old-fashioned, heavy-rimmed spectacles, that sit diagonally across his face, so that he can look over the top of the right lens off into the distance, and through the other one at objects close by.

Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia, keeps in his office a volume known as the Baby Book. It contains the names of several hundred babies that have been named for him since he entered public life. Once a year he goes over the list and sends the younger babies a present.

Senators Owen, of Oklahoma, one of the collaborators in staging the new currency bill, was born on groundhog day and the tribal name given him by his Indian ancestors was Cherokee for the groundhog. But the strange thing about it was that the Indians do not celebrate groundhog day, and they never thought of the coincidence in the name and the date.

The old saying that it is impossible for any one to eat a quail a day for 30 days may be true. And so is this: As Justice Charles E. Hughes, of the U. S. Supreme Court, has not missed a lamb chop every noon—plump lamb chops, cooked a certain way—since he ascended the Supreme Court bench, more than three years ago.

Mr. Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts, fellow Senator sat at lunch in the restaurant one day, and Lodge told to his associate that he hoped to be in office. The other Senator noted that Lodge was eating green apple with lots of cream on it, and French fries—Lodge's favorite noonday repast.

"Well," he observed, "if you are on eating combinations like that, you'll soon get your wish."

The biggest eaters in public life, when narrowed it down to three men, are Secretary William Jennings Bryan, Senator Ollie James and Senator Moses E. App. Secretary Bryan always eats usual dinner at home before going to attend a formal dinner. His specialty is cheese of various denominations. App is most formidable at consuming food, thick cream. James is best at an around eating tournament.

Senator Carroll S. Page, of Vermont, the most methodical man in public life. He is always the first at breakfast in his Washington hotel, because he is invariably on the threshold at the exact moment the dining room door is opened. Likewise he always enters the Senate chamber exactly at the stroke of the hour. He carries his pocket money, so far as possible, in $2.50 gold pieces.

"How'd you like to be governor, Slade?"

Slade threw back his head with a laugh that was intended to denote complete unconcern.

"Oh—that talk! Did the evening papers put that into your head or—?" and he paused significantly, "did you put it into the evening papers?"

Strickland's laugh was a practical admission.

"It would mean a hard fight, Slade. The water-front crowd's against you, and you can't get on without their influence."

"Not in this town, at least," amended Katherine.

"You've got to have Wesley Merritt, his paper, his highfalutin editorials and his speechmaking—and his wife," Strickland explained. "He and his crowd run the town."

"Oh, you mean my neighbors?" asked Slade. "They'll come around," he finished, meaningly.

"But, man alive! Only today Merritt's attack on you was scurrilous. I remonstrated with him myself. He's your out-and-out enemy. I've tried to get him to—come over and shake hands, but he swears he'll never cross your threshold."

"I guess they'll come when I want 'em to come," Slade interrupted, with an assurance his auditors could not understand. "In fact, I'm looking for 'em any minute now," and he consulted his watch.

"You're looking for them—here—to-night?" gasped Strickland, showing plainly he thought Slade was making a joke of the matter.

"Yes, tonight," replied the would-be governor, quietly, and turned to Katherine.

Strickland subsided, a question growing in his mind as to whether he had fully measured the man he expected to use for his own political and financial ends. There was in Slade's method of fighting a direct and open quality that would make him hard to handle in the crooked and indirect ways of political life.

Katherine Strickland's eyes narrowed as she met Slade's gaze. Her quick, calculating mind saw in this man the possibility of realizing her highest hopes and ambitions. With such a man a woman could scale any heights—reach any goal. He was hard—yes! But a man needs to be hard in these days and times if he is ever to accomplish anything. In her fertile brain smoldered ambitions as great as his ambitions that she now realized would never be attained unless she made some great, radical change in her life.

She had pushed her father as far as the man would—could go. She had outdistanced every girl in her circle. She had reached high, but she had triumphed. Now she was at the end of her tether. It was a matter of making some one huge stroke or sinking back into stupid obscurity, a situation all the more bitter because of her previous successes. The thought of settling down into the everyday life of the western city where she was born made her very soul squirm. Surely there was something more in life for her. Surely there were bigger goals to be gained.

She had never realized how empty

She Was All That Mary Slade Was Not.

the old home life was until now, when she suddenly found herself a part of it again after the brilliant European season and the stimulating, exciting life in diplomatic circles at the capital. The thought of remaining in the West, a big frog in a little puddle, had grown positively hateful to her. Big or little herself, she wanted a big puddle. She was quite satisfied in her own mind that no puddle would be so big that she couldn't become a frog of considerable size in it.

Now, as her restless brain and soul clamored for higher goals and a wider field, the thought of Slade's millions, Slade's dominating, forceful personality, Slade's reputation for sweeping everything before him, Slade's probable governorship, flashed through her mind like a burning streak of electric fire. With him, with his weapons, what a career lay before a woman!

Just as suddenly she found herself wondering what sort of a woman had been a mate to this man for so many years. She was conscious of a poignant pang of envy—jealousy almost—against this woman who had the opportunity which was denied her.

"Well, what do you think of your own country, now you're back?" she heard Slade's voice saying. "Seem big to you?"

"Oh, I like Washington," she said, bringing herself back to the conversation with difficulty.

Her father, noticing her abstraction, remarked indulgently: "She likes Washington, Slade. She likes the East, but she doesn't tell it to everybody on account of father's votes. Now, Slade and I love our western city, eh, Slade?"

"Well," with some reluctance, "it's a good starting point," Slade admitted.

"Ah!" Katherine exclaimed, now thoroughly herself again. "There's a man for you! He's not going to let a town stand in his way. Mr. Slade, this is father's Waterloo. He's been a great disappointment to me. That's the worst of parents. We children never know how they're going to turn out. If father had only listened to me it would have been Washington for him—Washington for me. But he wouldn't leave the West. If there'd only been a drop of Napoleon in father," she concluded with a sudden burst of vehemence.

"Napoleon!" repeated the senator.

"Yes, Napoleon. He got what he wanted, and nothing ever stood in his path. I just love the way he rode over poor old Josephine's heart, don't you?"—and she turned to Slade.

"But he was right!" she continued, earnestly, as if she were making a plea for something that lay very close to her own heart. "Why should we let anyone hold us back? I wouldn't. But mother didn't want to leave the West, so father stuck to his town and his friends and his state. Now he stands in the background and boosts other men politically."

"He wants to boost you," she added, suddenly.

"Letting out secrets," her father accused, playfully.

But Katherine was never more serious. "You're his dark horse," she persisted.

"You're a lucky man, senator," Slade broke in, as he watched Katherine admiringly. "You're a lucky man to have a charming young woman behind you in the race."

"That's all we women are for," answered Katherine, bitterly, "standing behind some man and watching him do things."

"Why, child alive, you do things yourself," the senator remonstrated. "She makes busts, Slade—heads. Done some big guns in Europe."

Katherine sighed and leaned back wearily in her chair. "Oh, in my feminine way, I model," she admitted.

"But if there'd been one drop of Napoleon in father I shouldn't have had to fall back on molding clay. I should have been molding," she hesitated, and then finished daintily, "opinions and people."

CHAPTER III.

Just how much more freely Katherine might have revealed her aims and inspirations, Slade could not know, for at that moment the butler appeared and engaged his attention.

As the man withdrew, Slade spread wide his arms and announced grandiloquently:

"The gentleman of the water-front crowd, if you please. Mr. Wesley Merritt, the gentleman who wasn't going to darken my door, is here!"

He broke off with a loud, mirthless laugh. As well as any man who ever lived, he liked to feel the grip of his own power. He had come to the point where it was genuine satisfaction to humble men and conquer them.

"Wesley Merritt!" the senator was almost too surprised for speech. "After his abuse of you in the paper today—And Hunt! How did you do it?"

"This is the sort of thing I like," broke in Katherine, eagerly. "Oh, it's so exciting," she declared, her eyes glowing with eagerness and animation. "Oh, Mr. Slade, how did you make them kow-tow?"

Slade's reply was prevented by the brusque, excited entrance of Merritt and Hunt. The pair, angry and beligerent, strode into the room without a word. Merritt, small, wiry, energetic, was in the lead, followed closely by his shadow and echo, Hunt.

"Is it true?" he demanded angrily, before he realized that Slade was not alone. "How do you do, senator—Miss Strickland!" he exclaimed, in surprise. "Lovely home you have, Mr. Slade," he added, trying to adjust himself to the scene he had not expected.

"An astonishing rumor has reached us, Mr. Slade," he finally declared, getting down to the business of his invasion. "It concerns you, senator. It concerns every public-spirited man in the city. Is it true, Slade, that you have bought up our entire water front on which our residences—our old homes—the mansions of the city face, and that you intend building factories there?"

"Why, yes," Slade admitted, with maddening calmness.

"What?" Strickland almost shouted, completely astounded.

"But—but it can't be done," Merritt was so excited now that he stuttered his words.

"It can't be done," echoed Hunt. He was well paid for being an echo.

"Our best people live there," protested Merritt.

"I live there," Hunt added, with accumulated emphasis.

"All of us," Merritt continued, "take pride in the view along the water front. It's damnable. Why, out of common decency, man—What do you want of factories, anyway?" he demanded, completely angered and out of patience.

Slade's voice was almost a drawl, it was so low-pitched and so provokingly calm. "Why didn't you and your associates protect your holdings?" he inquired.

"How'd we know a man with millions would come along and buy up the whole beach?" Merritt's wrath was getting beyond the control that Katherine's presence demanded.

Tabs of Famous Men.

President Marshall is a man of superstitions. One of them is that luck to enter or leave a building except through the door by which he first entered it.

Believing as he does in this theory, Marshall never leaves the Capitol except the door at the carriage entrance in the Senate wing.

William C. Redfield, Secretary of Commerce, was stripped of all serious and just allowed to take his own case, he would run a motor boat by night and a piano by night—and sing. He has also given a good deal of attention in his hours of recreation to the raising of roses, whiskers and collie dogs.

Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman, of Illinois, wears his old-fashioned, heavy-rimmed spectacles, that sit diagonally across his face, so that he can look over the top of the right lens off into the distance, and through the other one at objects close by.

Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia, keeps in his office a volume known as the Baby Book. It contains the names of several hundred babies that have been named for him since he entered public life. Once a year he goes over the list and sends the younger babies a present.

Sena or Owen, of Oklahoma, one of the collaborators in staging the new currency bill, was born on groundhog day and the tribal name given him by his Indian ancestors was Cherokee for the groundhog. But the strange thing about it was that the Indians do not celebrate groundhog day, and they never thought of the coincidence in the name and the date.

The old saying that it is impossible for any one to eat a quail a day for 30 days may be true. And so is this: Associate Justice Charles E. Hughes, of the U. S. Supreme Court, has not missed a lamb chop since he ascended the Court bench, more than three years ago.

Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts, and fellow Senator sat at lunch in the restaurant one day, and Lodge turned to his associate that he hoped to be in office. The other Senator noted that Lodge was eating green apple with lots of cream on it, and French fries—Lodge's favorite noonday repast.

"Well," he observed, "if you go on eating combinations like that, you'll soon get your wish."

The biggest eaters in public life, when narrowed it down to three men, are Secretary William Jennings Bryan, Senator Ollie James and Senator Moses E. App. Secretary Bryan always eats a usual dinner at home before going to attend a formal dinner. His specialty is cheese of various denominations, and thick cream. James is best at a round eating tournament.

Senator Carroll S. Page, of Vermont, the most methodical man in public life. He is always the first at breakfast in this Washington hotel, because he is invariably on the threshold at the exact moment the dining room door is opened. Likewise he always enters the Senate chamber exactly at the stroke of the hour. He carries his pocket money, so far as possible, in $2.50 gold pieces.

The Governor's Lady

"How'd you like to be governor, Slade?"

Slade threw back his head with a laugh that was intended to denote complete unconcern.

"Oh—that talk! Did the evening papers put that into your head or—?" and he paused significantly, "did you put it into the evening papers?"

Strickland's laugh was a practical admission.

"It would mean a hard fight, Slade. The water-front crowd's against you, and you can't get on without their influence."

"Not in this town, at least," amended Katherine.

"You've got to have Wesley Merritt, his paper, his highfalutin editorials and his speechmaking—and his wife," Strickland explained. "He and his crowd run the town."

"Oh, you mean my neighbors?" asked Slade. "They'll come around," he finished, meaningly.

"But, man alive! Only today Merritt's attack on you was scurrilous. I remonstrated with him myself. He's your out-and-out enemy. I've tried to get him—to come over and shake hands, but he swears he'll never cross your threshold—"

"I guess they'll come when I want 'em to come," Slade interrupted, with an assurance his auditors could not understand. "In fact, I'm looking for 'em any minute now," and he consulted his watch.

"You're looking for them—here—to-night?" gasped Strickland, showing plainly he thought Slade was making a joke of the matter.

"Yes, tonight," replied the would-be governor, quietly, and turned to Katherine.

Strickland subsided, a question growing in his mind as to whether he had fully measured the man he expected to use for his own political and financial ends. There was in Slade's method of fighting a direct and open quality that would make him hard to handle in the crooked and indirect ways of political life.

Katherine Strickland's eyes narrowed as she met Slade's gaze. Her quick, calculating mind saw in this man the possibility of realizing her highest hopes and ambitions. With such a man a woman could scale any heights—reach any goal. He was hard—yes! But a man needs to be hard in these days and times if he is ever to accomplish anything. In her fertile brain smoldered ambitions as great as his ambitions that she now realized would never be attained unless she made some great, radical change in her life.

She had pushed her father as far as the man would—could go. She had outdistanced every girl in her circle. She had reached high, but she had triumphed. Now she was at the end of her tether. It was a matter of making some one huge stroke or sinking back into stupid obscurity, a situation all the more bitter because of her previous successes. The thought of settling down into the everyday life of the western city where she was born made her very soul squirm. Surely there was something more in life for her. Surely there were bigger goals to be gained.

She had never realized how empty

She Was All That Mary Slade Was Not.

the old home life was until now, when she suddenly found herself a part of it again after the brilliant European season and the stimulating, exciting life in diplomatic circles at the capital. The thought of remaining in the West, a big frog in a little puddle, had grown positively hateful to her. Big or little herself, she wanted a big puddle. She was quite satisfied in her own mind that no puddle would be so big that she couldn't become a frog of considerable size in it.

Now, as her restless brain and soul clamored for higher goals and a wider field, the thought of Slade's millions, Slade's dominating, forceful personality, Slade's reputation for sweeping everything before him, Slade's probable governorship, flashed through his mind like a burning streak of electric fire. With him, with his weapons, what a career lay before a woman!

Just as suddenly she found herself wondering what sort of a woman had been a mate to this man for so many years. She was conscious of a poignant pang of envy—jealousy almost—against this woman who had the opportunity which was denied her.

"Well, what do you think of your own country, now you're back?" she heard Slade's voice saying. "Seem big to you?"

"Oh, I like Washington," she said, bringing herself back to the conversation with difficulty.

Her father, noticing her abstraction, remarked indulgently: "She likes Washington, Slade. She likes the East, but she doesn't tell it to everybody on account of father's votes. Now, Slade and I love our western city, eh, Slade?"

"Well," with some reluctance, "it's a good starting point," Slade admitted. "Ah!" Katherine exclaimed, now thoroughly herself again. "There's a man for you! He's not going to let a town stand in his way. Mr. Slade, this is father's Waterloo. He's been a great disappointment to me. That's the worst of parents. We children never know how they're going to turn out. If father had only listened to me it would have been Washington for him—Washington for me. But he wouldn't cross the Delaware. He wouldn't leave the West. If there'd only been a drop of Napoleon in father," she concluded with a sudden burst of vehemence.

"Napoleon!" repeated the senator. "Yes, Napoleon. He got what he wanted, and nothing ever stood in his path. I just love the way he rode over poor old Josephine's heart, don't you?"—and she turned to Slade.

"But he was right!" she continued, earnestly, as if she were making a plea for something that lay very close to her own heart. "Why should we let anyone hold us back? I wouldn't. But mother didn't want to leave the West, so father stuck to his town and his friends and his state. Now he stands in the background and boosts other men politically."

"He wants to boost you," she added, suddenly.

"Letting out secrets," her father accused, playfully.

But Katherine was never more serious. "You're his dark horse," she persisted.

"You're a lucky man, senator," Slade broke in, as he watched Katherine admiringly. "You're a lucky man to have a charming young woman behind you in the race."

"That's all we women are for," answered Katherine, bitterly, "standing behind some man and watching him do things."

"Why, child alive, you do things yourself," the senator remonstrated. "She makes busts, Slade—heads. Done some big runs in Europe."

Katherine sighed and leaned back wearily in her chair. "Oh, in my feminine way, I model," she admitted. "But if there'd been one drop of Napoleon in father I shouldn't have had to fall back on molding clay. I should have been molding," she hesitated, and then finished daintily, "opinions and people."

CHAPTER III.

Just how much more freely Katherine might have revealed her aims and inspirations, Slade could not know, for at that moment the butler appeared and engaged his attention.

As the man withdrew, Slade spread wide his arms and announced grandiloquently:

"The gentleman of the water-front crowd, if you please. Mr. Wesley Merritt, the gentleman who wasn't going to darken my door, is here!"

He broke off with a loud, mirthless laugh. As well as any man who ever lived, he liked to feel the grip of his own power. He had come to the point where it was genuine satisfaction to humble men and conquer things.

"Wesley Merritt!" the senator was almost too surprised for speech. "After his abuse of you in the paper today—, And Hunt! How did you do it?"

"This is the sort of thing I like," broke in Katherine, eagerly. "Oh, it's so exciting," she declared, her eyes glowing with eagerness and animation. "Oh, Mr. Slade, how did you make them know?"

Slade's reply was prevented by the brusque, excited entrance of Merritt and Hunt. The pair, angry and beligerent, strode into the room without a word. Merritt, small, wiry, energetic, was in the lead, followed closely by his shadow and echo, Hunt.

"Is it true?" he demanded angrily, before he realized that Slade was not alone. "How do you do, senator—Miss Strickland!" he exclaimed, in surprise.

"Lovely home you have, Mr. Slade," he added, trying to adjust himself to the scene he had not expected. "An astonishing rumor has reached us, Mr. Slade," he finally declared, getting down to the business of his invasion. "It concerns you, senator. It concerns every public-spirited man in the city. Is it true, Slade, that you have bought up our entire water front on which our residences—our old homes—the mansions of the city face, and that you intend building factories there?"

"Why, yes," Slade admitted, with maddening calmness.

"What?" Strickland almost shouted, completely astounded.

"But—but it can't be done," Merritt was so excited now that he stuttered his words.

"It can't be done," echoed Hunt. He was well paid for being an echo.

"Our best people live there," protested Merritt.

"All of us," Merritt continued, "take pride in the view along the water front. It's damnable. Why, out of common decency, man—What do you want of factories, anyway?" he demanded, completely angered and out of patience.

Slade's voice was almost a drawl, it was so low-pitched and so provokingly calm. "Why didn't you and your associates protect your holdings?" he inquired.

"How'd we know a man with millions would come along and buy up the whole beach?" Merritt's wrath was getting beyond the control that Katherine's presence demanded.

Daniel Slade.

"Slade, if you persist in this," he thundered, "I'm going to take off my coat and hit back. My paper has an enormous outside circulation, and I'll baste you once every day. If you propose running for governor, you won't get one vote in your own town. And in one month, or less, you'll find San Francisco has a gorgeous climate."

Slade was unperturbed by Merritt's threats or Merritt's bulldozing. "All right, Merritt," he advised, good-naturedly, "go ahead with your paper, I'll take my chances."

"You will, eh?" Merritt's tone was ominous. "What sort of factories are you going to build?"

"Well," drawled Slade, coolly, "I was thinking of putting up glue factories!"

"Glue!" The one word jumped from everyone's mouth at once. "Glue!" they all repeated, and looked at each other in consternation.

"The h—l you say," then remembering himself, "I beg your pardon, Miss Strickland."

"It can't be done," Merritt went on. "You can't build glue factories here," and he emphasized every word with an angry shake of his finger.

"By God, you—"

He broke off as he saw Bob Hayes stride into the room. Hayes, as Slade's lawyer and almost a member of the family, had the entree to the house at all times.

"Here's my lawyer," remarked Slade, dryly, "ask him."

"Of course it can be done," Hayes informed them, convincingly. "It's perfectly legitimate."

Then, as if to dismiss a perfectly obvious subject, he turned to the girl, who had been enjoying every point that Slade had scored.

Katherine's eyes lighted with warm welcome. It was the first time she had seen Hayes since she had returned. He was the man she had once wanted to marry, once before her father had given her the choice of Hayes or a finishing school in Paris and a tour of Europe. Now she greeted him with cordial friendship, but with none of the sweet tenderness he might have expected from her. Once she had looked up into his eyes and thought him a god. Now, her eyes blinded by the glare of ambition, she saw only a good looking chap, a struggling lawyer, a man who hadn't made any particular mark in the world. She returned Hayes' burning, penetrating gaze with cool, unflinching frankness. In another moment she had turned from him and was earnestly watching Slade, listening to his every word with eager intensity.

"You see, I'm a very simple sort of fellow," Slade was saying, "don't drink—don't smoke—don't keep yachts or horses, don't keep 'em"—he stopped in his oft-repeated formula as he remembered Katherine's presence, "don't keep horses, so I must do something, as I was saying to Mrs. Slade today. I don't want to bother my neighbors, so I'll build high chimneys, so the smoke won't trouble you much. I'm going into the glue business. That is, of course," and he paused and surveyed the group about him with a complacent elevation of his eyebrows, "that is, unless you gentlemen can keep me busy in some other way. I'm a very active man."

Katherine leaned forward with tense expression to see how the man's opponents would take his game. The senator was smiling, Merritt tapping his foot restlessly.

"Well, boys, it looks as though he had us—strong!" Strickland broke the silence. "Glue! Whew!"

OUR BALANCE IN THE BANK GROWS BIGGER EVERY WEEK IT WILL COME IN HANDY SOME DAY

THIS IS THE WAY THE FORTUNE STARTED

The man who made the above drawing made it from his own experience. He learned early that BANKING his money was the proper thing to do. YOU can do the same and before you know it, it will become a habit and a joy. You will take more pleasure ADDING to that bank account than you will in spending those dribs and drabs of money that keep so many poor ALL OF THEIR LIVES at the beginning of summer, not at the end.

Men's Summer Suits at Reduced Prices

In order to attain the highest record in our business career we are going to offer our customers an inducement to buy early and to buy now; therefore, we have put on this reduction on all Men's Spring and Summer Suits. We have always marked our goods at a low profit and will continue to do so, but we are anxious to break all records for a cash business. This is your time to save money. Now come early.
